Dear Chair Teague,

I am pleased to write on behalf of Kelley Schoger. Kelley was honored by being chosen to participate in a devised workshop performance directed by Broadway Director, Andrew Palermo at this past 2016 ATME Pre-Conference. Kelley was also among a select few invited as a guest presenter at the ATME Pre-Confernece. Kelley presented a moving and informative presentation entitled, Her Destined Port.

Recently ATME hosted the organization's bi-annual pre-conference in collaboration with the Association of Theatre in Higher Education Conference 2016 Conference in Chicago, Illinois. Kelley was one of the few chosen ATME members to represent the organization as a performer in a performance directed by ATME's keynote speaker, Andrew Palermo. The performance was presented for ATME Members as a closing celebration for the pre-conference. The performance was peer-reviewed and discussed in a post-performance talk-back with the participants and director.

Kelley brought a wealth of talent and professionalism to this project. Her contribution was invaluable. Her commitment and creativity led to a successful performance and an insightful conversation. All ATME pre-conference participates were able to expand their knowledge and skill in making devised performance due in large part to her efforts.

Kelley's presentation, Her Destined Port explored how she devised a puppetry performance inspired by autobiographical material. The presentation provided structural insight in how to make devised theatre. She also demonstrated how to balance boundaries when using auto-biographical material. The ATME cohort was visibly moved and inspired by her work.

Kelley's commitment to ATME and her contribution to the pedagogy of theatre movement is initiating positive-progressive changes within the organization and performance practice around the country.

We are honored to have her has a member ATME.

Sincerely,
Laura Rikard,
